FALL 1986 COUNCIL MEETING

Registrations for the fall meeting of the Depository Library Council continue to pour in, assuring a record attendance. As of July 15, more than 75 names have been received. Deadline for advance registration is September 2 (see Administrative Notes, Vol. 7, no. 7, May, 1986).

Remember, hotel reservations must be made directly by you with the Holiday Inn-Capitol (202-479-4000). Some 50 of the available 85 rooms already are spoken for. Reservations are strictly on a first-come, first-served basis (see Administrative Notes, Vol. 7, no. 11, July, 1986).

The Library of Congress and the Center for the Book will help GPO celebrate its 125th anniversary with a very special commemorative program on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 15. Dr. Daniel Boorstin, Librarian of Congress, will be the main speaker, together with Dr. John Y. Cole, executive director of the Center for the Book at the Library of Congress. Other speakers, to be announced later, will also participate, and there will be a special exhibit showing examples of GPO's contributions to the art of printing over the last 125 years. The program will be held in the Mumford Room of the James Madison Building at the Library of Congress. Following the program, a reception will be held in the Buffet Dining Room of the Madison Building.

A preliminary agenda for the October 15-17 Depository Library Council meeting is being developed by Chair Diane Smith, with assistance from Superintendent of Documents, Don Fossedal, and Library Programs Service Director, Mark Scully. The three met on July 17-18 to plan the agenda and to review a number of key issues in advance of the October meeting.

"Age of Electricity"

This is the fifth in a series of articles commemorating GPO's 125th Anniversary and prepared by Historian/Curator Daniel R. MacGilvray.

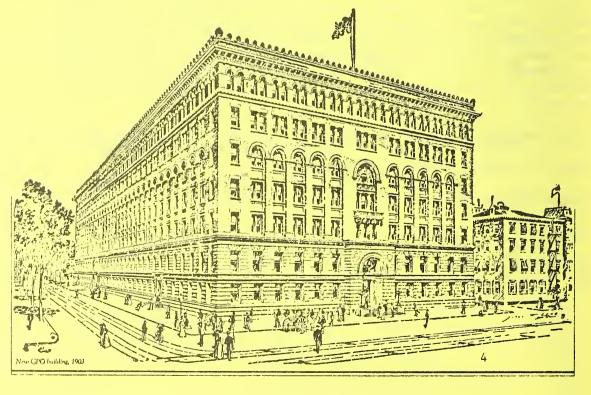

Interestingly, in 1882 the Government Printing Office's first two dynamos and related equipment were charged to the "account of the Congressional Record." Earlier introduction of new technology, such as the Bullock perfecting press of 1866, and Cottrell & Babcock's tworevolution cylinder presses of 1878, were sanctioned by the Joint Committee on Printing to enhance production of the Congressional Record. Not surprisingly, Public Printer Sterling P. Rounds noted in 1884: "The Edison system of electric light, which was introduced in the Record room by my predecessor [Defrees], has been extended to the press and document rooms, with very gratifying results. The light produced is cheaper than gas, far superior in all respects, and is much preferred by the employees. Connection has also been made between the electric-light engine and the press room, so that in case of accident to the main engine there would not be a suspension of work in the press room."

By 1895, Public Printer Thomas E.

Benedict was faced with the increasing need to shift from steam powered presses to electrical power. He decided not to try to expand the existing electrical lighting plant, but instead to request a new one. He made his case as follows: "Electricity applied to machinery has been found to be not only very economical, but a great advantage and convenience. Its easy adaptation to the varying speeds required by printing machinery, its safety, and the ease with which it may be produced and controlled are all points in its favor. The belt-power system in use here was a continuous one, and when one machine was in operation every belt and pulley was set in motion, with consequent danger of fire from friction. Direct electrical power will permit the independent operation of any machine, either day or night, and will also allow machines to be placed in any part of the building without regard to lines of shafting. Besides these advantages, full protection is secured from any general stopping of machinery, such as frequently occurred under the belt system." Progress was rapid; and, in 1896 Public Printer Benedict was able to say, "The Government Printing Office power and lighting plant is now for the first time such as will prevent interruption of its work by reason of the failure of any single source of power or lighting supply."

A great deal of work by Public Printers focused on the buildings acquired in 1861, additions to them. modifications of them, and plans and justifications for new buildings. Of the structures that stood on the site bounded by H and North Capitol Streets, and Massachusetts and New Jersey Avenues, between 1861 and 1902, none survive. The oldest building still standing is located on the northwest corner of North Capitol and G Streets. Its foundation was dug beginning in 1899; and it was completed in 1903. The cost of the land. obtained through condemnation proceedings, was $190,028.06. The cost of construction was $2,429,000. A local architect, James G. Hill, was chosen; and the preparation of plans and construction was supervised by Captain John S. Sewell, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Assigned to H. K. Collins. Chief Engineer of the Government Printing Office, was the task of "planning, installing, and operating the steam power, the plumbing, ventilating, steam heating, and cold drinking water systems." Entrusted to the Chief Electrician, W. H. Tapley, was the "duty of planning, installing, and operating the electrical system by which the motive power and lighting of the new and old buildings" were to be operated.

The building was described as follows: "The new building fronts 175.3 feet on North Capitol Street, and extends 408 feet on G Street. The basement walls are of brick, and the exterior walls of red brick, with red sandstone and terra cotta trimmings. The outer walls of the court and the inner walls of the building are of white-face brick, and all stairway and elevator walls and toilet rooms are of whiteenameled brick. The building rises from the surface of the ground seven full stories, exclusive of basement and attic. The floor space is equal to 377,200 square feet, or about 101/2 acres Adjoining the basement is a fireproof vault for the storage of stereotype and electrotype plates. Its dimensions are 175 by 20 feet on North Capitol Street, and 408 by 20 feet on G Street. It is located under the west pavement of the former street and the north pavement of the latter. It is estimated it has a storage capacity for 2,000,000 plates.

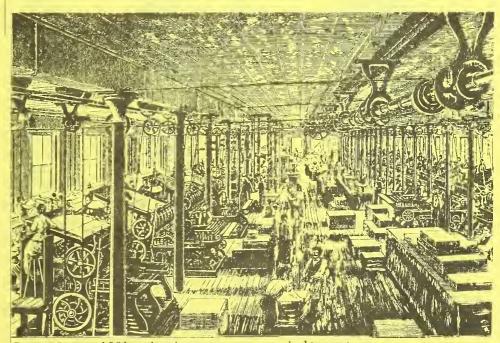

"The first floor of the building is occupied by the press and roller divisions; the second floor by a portion of the folding division and the supervising and clerical force of the office; the third floor by the folding division; the fourth floor by the bindery; the fifth and sixth floors by typographical and proof divisions; and the seventh floor by the divisions devoted to job work, and the electrotype and stereotype foundry A pneumatic tube system for the rapid transmission of copy and proof to the various portions of the office has been installed, and is in successful operation . . . In the loft of the building are located ventilating fans, operated by electricity, and the machinery for operating the carriers in the pneumatic tubes, the power being also furnished by electric motors. Provision has been made for eight elevators for passenger service, four freight elevators, one sidewalk elevator, and two form elevators.

"The power, heat, and light for the old and new buildings is furnished from a plant which is remarkable for its efficiency and economy. It extends from lackson Alley in the north to G Street on the south. The steam is furnished from eight boilers of Scotch marine type, of 300 horsepower each, supplied with appliances for saving and reusing heat, and these furnish steam for operating four cross-compound condensing engines direct connected to electric generators. One of the engines is of 200 horsepower, one of 450 horsepower, and two of 800 horsepower each. The economy of fuel in the production of power, heat, and light by this plant is cause for marvel in the minds of experienced operators of motive power. With one minor exception each piece of machinery in both buildings is operated by a separate electric motor, and electric currents are furnished day and night for more than 10,000 lights.

"The most important consideration connected with the new building is that it is fireproof from basement to attic. The frame is of open-hearth steel, the window casings of iron, and brick and porous terra cotta protect columns, girders, and beams from expansion by fire. The structure is so substantial that heavy printing presses and other machinery are operated on the seventh floor without apparent vibration. A novel and useful feature of the new building is a plant for the supply of drinking water, without the accompaniment of ice, to all the operatives. Seventy-five drinking fountains are placed in convenient locations, supplied from tanks of filtered water in the basement, and the temperature of the water reduced to a palatable degree by passage through an ammonia plant."
